

Tyler Hodgson (b.2001) is from Hilliard, Ohio. His compositional journeys began in middle school where he sought to write music to challenge himself as a violist.

Under the guidance of his orchestra director Erin Broadhurst, Alumnus of Baldwin Wallace Conservatory, he continued to write music branching out into many different ensemble types and musical styles.

During his time at the Baldwin Wallace Conservatory his styled has been defined by a blending of functional and dysfunctional harmonies and combining concepts of many different musical styles. Tyler currently studies Music Composition with an emphasis in Contemporary Media at Baldwin Wallace University under the instruction of Dr. Clint Needham.
